IV. ABOUT AAC CREDENTIALS

AAC offers four levels to recognize artistic achievement. The highest level is Member of Excellence. Members may accumulate credits from applicable show acceptances and awards within and outside of AAC.

Credits achieved prior to membership do not qualify for any level. If more than one entry is accepted or awarded in any particular show, only one piece will be considered for credentials.

A single accepted work may count only one time even if juried into a future show by a different judge. Applied credit may be reclassified for highest and best use: if a juried work used for credit wins an award in a subsequent show, it may count as an award credit.

Additionally, 10 AAC volunteer hours are required for each level. A volunteer sign-up sheet is available at the Grandview Gallery front desk for each artist to record the number of hours worked.

Levels and required credits (either Award or Juried) are as follows:

VII. CONFLICT OF INTEREST (this full text is part of AAC bylaws, Article IX)

The purpose of this policy is to avoid even the appearance of impropriety that arises when a person who makes or influences a decision in behalf of AAC also has a personal interest on the other side of the transaction.

What is a conflict of interest? For example, if AAC is to purchase goods from a merchant and AAC's representative in the transaction has a personal or family financial interest in the selling merchant, that representative is a "conflicted person". The representative has done nothing wrong - yet. The wrong occurs when the representative sees that he/she will have an interest on both sides of the transaction but fails to disclose to AAC's Board his/her interest in the merchant. This disclosure would give AAC's Board an opportunity to avoid the conflict. This might be done by buying from a different merchant, who presents no conflict, or by having a different AAC representative handle the purchase, or by proceeding with the transaction with full knowledge of the conflict but with special diligence, review and safeguards because of the conflict.

Gifts - The acceptance of gifts by an AAC representative from an organization from which AAC does business also create a conflict of interest or the appearance of one.

Definitions - "Conflicted person" is the AAC representative or his/her member has a financial interest on both sides of a transaction. For this purpose, "family member" includes the AAC representative's spouse, parent, child or child's spouse, sibling or sibling's spouse that has an interest in the transaction. "Financial interest" is an interest of any kind that could, or would appear to others to influence the AAC's representative's judgment in the transaction. "Transaction" includes a purchase or sale, loan, or any decision in which the AAC representative has a personal interest different from AAC's interest.

Procedure - Prior to making or participating in a decision on behalf of AAC, a conflicted person shall disclose all the facts of his/her position in the transaction to the AAC board. These facts and the Board's decision shall be included in the minutes. Likewise, if a Board member is aware of the possible conflicted transaction by others in the future as in the past, these transactions shall be disclosed to the Board so that interested parties can be invited to the Board meeting to discuss how to handle any conflicts.

The conflicted person may prefer to give all the facts to the chair prior to the Board meeting and then not attend the meeting at which the conflict will be discussed. The conflicted person shall not participate in or be present during the Board's discussion or decision making process other than to present the facts and respond to questions. No conflicted person shall attempt to exert his/her personal influence with respect to the matter, either in or outside the meeting.

Persons who are not AAC directors who are faced with making a decision on behalf of AAC in which decision they have a conflict shall report the situation as soon as possible to the Chair or President. Such persons will refrain from any action in the matter until they are informed how the Board wishes to handle the conflict of interest.

If it is not entirely clear that a conflict exists the matter should be reported to the Board so that the Board can decide whether it should treat the situation as a conflict.

All AAC representatives, including directors, members, and employees shall exercise care not to disclose confidential information acquired in connection with conflicts situations, especially information concerning the conflicted person's personal interest, business connections and family interests, except as necessary to investigate, decide, and correct the situation.

Annual Review Policy - Annually each AAC director and each committee or subcommittee chair shall be provided with and asked to review a copy of this Policy and to acknowledge in writing that he/she has done so.

Remember - anyone can find oneself in a position of needing to make a decision for AAC in which one has a personal financial interest. No wrong is involved. Most conflicts are easily cured, if they are promptly reported and confronted. The wrongdoing is in making such a decision (even as impartial as one can) without reporting it and letting others who are not conflicted decide how to proceed.
